DIARY of summer day: The lake is calm in the early morning. What's the use of living on the water if you don't take advantage of it? Decide to go for a swim.

Reach down bathing trunks. Pad past the two boys who are asleep on old chesterfield on the veranda, their toys and stuffed animals scattered around nearby. Their upstairs room was too hot.

Passing by front of house, regretfully take note of peeling paint, ramshackle, spindly look of facade, and too many toys, lawn mowers, other oddments scattered about; boats still waiting to be caulked and launched.

Water seems milk-warm up to the waist, but chilly at chest and arm-level. Then away, splosh-splosh, to a neighbor's wharf.

Stop splashing for a while, and look along the smooth lake at eye-level. The water is green with the cheave of the trees and the million flecks of the shadow of the trees and the million flecks of algae dusted through it.

And there is a brilliant blue dragon-fly, riding a chip of wood, and a little further ahead, a young mallard duck fussing about. A kingfisher gives his rattling call and dives for a fish.

Back at the starting point again, puffing and spluttering. Don't swim enough; legs easily tired, wind shorter than it should be. A minute later, feeling fine. Leap around and do some exercises. Remark that exercise is what a man needs.

"You don't look too well," says Peggy, cooking breakfast. Suddenly realize you don't feel too well, either. Not used to flinging yourself around early in the morning. Retreat to bed for extra 15 minutes' nap, amid scornful laughter from Peggy.

Driving into town, notice hitch-hikers bound for another lake, Thetis, with bathing suits. Lake is only a couple of miles away. What's wrong with their legs? Don't like stopping on sloping, curvy, gravel-shouldered stretch by Thetis, anyway.

Refrain from picking the boys up. In past, have picked up hitch-hikers travelling only 100 yards. Why are they so lazy?

At the office, mail very sparse. Some expected letters, long-awaited, still haven't arrived. People write as little as possible in the summer. Will the time come when everything shuts down for an time come when everything shuts down for an eight-week siesta? People are far more inclined to telephone than to write, when they have something on their minds.

Saturday Evening Post runs think piece by theologian Reinhold Niebuhr this week. Ever since news of Russian rocket and satellite triumph, think-ing has become respectable in United States.

"Post" formerly confined itself to romantic adventure and cosy wish-fulfillment, most cleverly contrived. Now it carries thousands of words by eminent eggheads. But the term "egghead" seldom heard in the United States now.

Caption: "The test of religious faith, says a famous theologian, is whether it can help us face insecurity without despair and clarify the problems

Old-fashioned test: "Is it true or false?" out of date now? Maybe it never was a proper test. I Niebuhr says: "Incidentally, most modern

Riedun's says: "Incidentally, most modern Biblical scholars take it for granted that Christ's resurrection was not a public event in the same sense as the crucifixion, but rather a spiritual experience of his disciples, a symbol of the early Christian faith that Christ's death represented the climax of a historical drama in which both the divine mystery and the human situation were definitively clarified."

This could be a statement of fact-or perhaps learned double-talk. Is religion turning into an elaborate plan for fooling ourselves? Its enemies will say it always

Don't feel much like thinking today, even though right-wing Americans now say that thinking is approved activity. News is full of Congo, Cuba, Nixon, Kennedy, Khrushchev, fallout and rockets. Back home soon, and try to write another piece. But what's the use? Russians, Americans, both so rocket-happy that there might not be any readers surving, tomorrow. Not many, at least. Might as well have another swim, and go to sleep.

Encouraging Trend

a substantial surplus of revenues over outlays will be welcome and encouraging news in governmental, financial and commercial circles throughout the free world. President Eisenhower's review of the improved budgetary position at Washington will make for increased confidence in the Western capitals of Europe. It will also act as check against latent inflationary pressures at home and help to stabilize prices at a time when such encouragement should go far to stimulate private endeavor after a period of some slowing down. In London, Paris, Bonn and Berne Mr. Eisenhower's report will answer Eisenhower's report will answer affirmatively one of the questions which overseas capitals have been asking during the difficult transition in changing trade and fiscal patterns

In Canada, the United States' strong budgetary position will be doubly welcomed. It implies that

THE fact that the United States there need be no wild swing in our own economy, so closely related to that of our big neighbor to the south. When governments keep their wants within the limit of their revenues there is a reserve of strength with which to face the future. Canada's trade is so interwoven with American markets that it is extremely sensitive to changes across the border. A black-ink budget at Washington a helpful and a healthy sign of better weather ahead. This should confirm Canada's own attitude with regard to monetary and other policies, and help to stimulate trade in a year that will be very welcome On the world plane this fresh assurance that the inflationary spiral -renewal of which has remained a threat over international commerce during the last few years—is receding should have a stabilizing effect all around. The relief in European capitals over this steadying down of the United States' domestic economy will be as sincere and genuine as in

Raising the Pension

THE stumbling block to a $75 per month old-age security pension is of course the cost. A flat increase across the board over the present $55 rate, according to the health minister, would mean a percentage raise in the multiple taxes that finance the universal pension scheme. The security fund would be debited with a -third increase amounting to some $226,000,000 a year.

At least a substantial part of this amount would go to those who per-haps don't need it. The security pension is all-inclusive; there are no strings to it. The millionaire can draw it as well as the most indigent. This system has some merits; every recipient is deemed to have earned it and there is thus no discrimination. The rich person drawing the pension pays back some of it in income tax, which is an offsetting factor. scheme's universal nature, also, gets rid of the objectionable means test

Yet if the security fund is to be curbs applied. There is the hint a graduated payment over and would merely be a variation of the means test, one which in fact is of necessity applied in some provinces— B.C. leading in particular—where an addtional bonus is given those who require assistance over and above the $55 allowance.

The health minister says the subject of an increase is premature, but the matter cannot rest there. The pressures for a larger pension are increasing. The $55 allowance is inadequate even though the Diefen-baker regime has to its credit the boost it granted on assuming office two years ago. It is a question of finding ways and means without materially raising the security tax

One method would be to limit the old-age pension to those above a cer-tain income, perhaps $3,000 per annum. Or alternately, pay it only to those not liable for income tax. Either method would invite some aspect of the means test, but in less objectionable form. The line may have to be drawn somewhere. There is also warrant for the idea of further study of a contributory pension scheme on the national scale beyond existing

Pre-Employment Training

SOME rewarding results have come from the experiment of the Greater Victoria School Board with an initial pre-employment training class, designed to help youths leaving school and on the eve of taking up their first jobs. Though limited in size, the effort developed two immediate benefits. A number of boys so improved in their standing and attitude to school work that will remain to complete their high school education, with life-long advantage to themselves. Other youths, who for various reasons wished to start work, were prepared for that in a special program which rounded out their aptitudes and gave them better chance of finding employment successfully. The initial program involved a class of 28 youths, 23 of whom finished the whole course. The results in human terms were encouraging, and school authorities are considering extending the program in future additional classes for boys in different age groups, and one for girls,

This undertaking is the more worthwhile because it is being applied to those who are most in need of practical help and encouragement at one of the most difficult transitions in their lives. Not all students are scholars. While many complete their high school education, there are others who grow discouraged and leave before they are really prepared coaching at such a time is valuable. and productive as the initial test has demonstrated. Some misconceptions to the contrary, most employers of young peo-ple starting in their first jobs are sincerely interested in them and wish to make a success of it. It helps a good deal when a young trainee starts with confidence in himself and a fair appreciation of what will be expected of him. Youths of schoolleaving ages are not often fully matured, and it will always be important to guide and assist them to make the difficult transition with a measure of success. Personal interest in their particular problems certainly is a first step. The initial classes conducted by the school board have proved their worth.

Interpreting the News

Propaganda Mill Turning

UPI Foreign Editor

IT is difficult to escape the uncomfortable conclusion that Nikita Khrushchev has scored some important points in the last week in his all-out propaganda campaign against the United States.

He has pressed forcefully his campaign to oust U.S. influence in Latin America, herein he is being aided and abetted by Fidel Castro of Cuba.

Then there also has been the incident of the U.S. Air Force RB-47 reconnaissance plane shot down by Russia over the Barents Sea. The latter is a point for Khrushchev only in that it long has been established that the truth seldom catches up to a big lie.

Khrushchev was first in announcing that the plane had been shot down, and gave validity to his charge that it violated Soviet air space by filing protests with the U.S., British and Norwegian

With a 24-hour head start, it is doubtful that equal effect will be achieved by the White House rejoinder that actually the J.S. plane was shot down over open an attempt to create an international incident.

The Latin American situation is more complex. Fitting perfectly into the Soviet scheme are the Cuban charges of U.S. aggression soon to be heard by the United Nations Security Council.

No matter what the final disposition of the case, it is certain that the full facilities of Moscow radio will be used to beam to South America the Cuban side of the case.

With Cuba established as a base, Khrushchev extended his campaign. The U.S. Monroe Doctrine has "outlived itself, outlived its usefulness and died a natural death," Khrushchev proclaimed.

Unfortunately, his words will fall pleasantly on many Latin American ears.

T is an open secret that Defence Minister Pearkes is to be the next lieutenant-governor of British Columbia, come fall, but the secret as to who is to be the next defence minister is not so

The best bet seems to be Agriculture Minister Douglas Harkness, even over the preschev is credited ent associate defence minister, Pierre Sevigny. Defence is a-and perhaps even "the"-most sensitive department of government. It is actually and potentially an area of great and politically serious embarrassment to the administration. Under Pearkes, defence policy has been a monumental muddle. This is not so much the fault of Pearkes as of the military uncertainties of the times. Yet the disturb ing fact remains that the country's defences are weaker than they should be; weaker than they would be if the government had faced up to hard

I felt from the start that Prime Minister Diefenbaker and Foreign Minister Green were indulging in wishful thinking about the prospects at Geneva. They miscalculated, they erred, and now they must-and we must-pay for their error.

The payment may be costly and hasty equipment of the forces with modern weapons in the quantities the alternative is greater reliance on U.S. military power for our defencesfence while the U.S. establishes its planes and missiles at bases in Canada. A disadvantage of the former

A disadvantage of the latter course, and one into which we are drifting by virtue of the government's procrastination, is a weakeninging of our claim to be a fully sovereign and independent state. The quality of our independence is certainly strained, in the Shakespearian sense, when, outside of NATO, we have to depend so utterly on one neighbor to defend us against another neighbor.

This is the defence dilemma, the backdrop against which the new de fence minister-presumably 57-year-

How Did They Manage?

(From The Ottawa Journal)

HAT was a pathetic little inter lude in the Commons last week when Parliament paid its tribute to technology. The simultaneous trans-lation system broke down and consternation descended upon the House of Commons. It was even suggested that the house should adjourn, Parliament apparently incapable of wisdebate without the device which makes men bilingual.

Happily, Mr. Lionel Chevrier, a man who is charmingly bilingual without knobs or ear-pieces, would not countenance such abject capitulation to electronics and urged that Parliament press on in singlelanguaged splendor, if need be.

it is all terribly disillusioning. Here we had believed, too innocently it now appears, that the translation system was really a superfluity, convenient perhaps for brushing up on the other language, but no necessity. Those who listened in on the translation were maintaining, we thought, a purist's interest in the efficiency of the translator.

After the scene of dread chaos during the 'minutes of the machine's failure last week, we wonder how did Members of Parliament fare for the 92 years before the mechanical marvel was installed.

Washington Angle

A Parallel With FDR

By MARQUIS CHILDS

THE intellectuals around Senator John F. Kennedy like to trace a parallel with Franklin D. Roosevelt They see his rise to power, including the selection of Lyndon B. Johnson as his running mate, following the pattern of F.D.R. a deal in the 1932 convention that nominated him to take a Texan, John Nance Garner as his vice-president. Roosevelt had a brains trust and at the same time he had shrewd politicos doing the necessary with the Democratic organizations. Similarly in the rich Kennedy stable there are horses for every purpose. When Roosevelt was inaugurated he faced a crisis such as few'men in America's history have confronted. With the last of the banks closing their doors, the economy had collapsed. But if Kennedy is elected president he will have to wrestle with problems at least as grave as any man who has occupied the White House in the past century.

How is Kennedy equipped to face the task ahead, first the campaign and then, if he is elected, the ordeal of the presidency?

He is a loner, a student of history with a strong sense of his own role in the history of his time. Given this reservation—that he is something of an enigma and likely to remain sohere is an effort to appraise the slender, almost boyish-looking man and the task he faces at the age

Youth and stamina: On the score of drive and ambition to carry him through the physical punishment that lies ahead, there can be little doubt, The issue of his wartime injury and his health was raised during the campaign, but as he has proved there is extraordinary endurance in that

Background: Here politics presents two diametrically opposed views. The Republican picture is of a rich son of a rich father who set out to buy the presidency for his boy, This will be the note sounded by the opposition between now and November, with emphasis bordering on contempt for one who has no right to presume in his inexperience to the highest office in the land.

The fact is that he has had a diverse experience made possible in no small part by the wealth of his father, Joseph P. Kennedy. He was at his father's side in the American Embassy in London at the outbreak of the Second World War as an active participant in the fearful course of events that saw Hitler ravage Europe. His experience in the war and in Congress are well known.

* * While he is a Roman Catholic his education was almost entirely outside the church. Many of his own faith feel that he is not a "good Catholic," that is to say, he has lived too much of his life outside the framework of the church. His father sent both Jack and his older brother, Joseph P. Jr., killed in the Second World War to London School of Economics to study under the late Harold Laski, a doctrinaire socialist.

Despite his strong stand on the separation of church and state, the opposition will try to identify him with a Catholic background and with his father's philanthropies which have poured millions into Catholic charities.

Judgment and conviction: In this rea, which bears most directly on the task ahead, there are doubts. Certainly he has shown that he can make up his mind on practical day-today matters and on issues as they cut across voter prejudice. He has never been charged with the indecisiveness laid to Adlai Stevenson

But on conviction-commitment to belief, the passionate espousal of a cause-James MacGregor Burns, who has written the best political biography of the campaign which is on the whole friendly to Kennedy, stops short. Is his appeal to the mass of the voters simply glamour, youth, the romantic legend of the poor little rich boy who made good? Or is there back of this appeal the solid conviction that speaks from the heart as well as the mind?

The turbulent days ahead will tell, The romantic appeal of youth and his ability as a campaigner may be enough to elect him. But in that other and far greater ordeal which lies beyond November he will, if he must face it, need all the judgment and conviction he can summon up.

On the Autobahn

Reference the report of Elleen Learoyd, in the Colonist under the title "Night on Autobahn Ends Perfect Day." We are, of course, very sorry that your reporter got stuck on one of our country's universally acclaimed four lane super-highways generally known as "autobahns." That is no fun in any country, including Canada. We emphatically deny, however, that roadside telephones have been installed on the autobahns at convenient intervals because, as your reporter claims, "They (the Germans) know there will be trouble, so the phones are ready." Phones, in fact, are there to enable motorists to contact aid service stations in case that there is a mechanical breakdown or other trouble of the sort.

Your reporter's suspicion as to the motives is totally unfounded. Her description of Lois Edwards reading "German verbs out loud to keep awake (she said if she died she wanted to know about it)" creates the impression as if people driving on Germany's super-highways have to be fatalists and expect death by the minute. Your readers will, we hope, agree that this type of reporting is, unfortu-nately, regretfully out of proportion. We sincerely hope that Elicen Learoyd never gets stuck on a Canadian high-way at three a.m. in the morning, between let's say, Sud-bury and Port Arthur, vainly looking for a telephone booth to alert the next service station.

If your reporter would have her way, all the trees along all the autobahns in our country would probably no longer hope for survival since they make such "excellent things to crash into." What a monstrous idea. The more as it is said to have happened in Canada, too, that a careless or reckless or impaired driver ended his journey at a tree.

"Everybody travels at the speed of light"—well, there is no speed limit except for the autobahn between Frankfurt and Mannheim and Heidelberg because it is the general idea that traffic should flow. Experiments with speed limits seem to suggest that they do not help to avoid accidents. Many a comment received by this office by Canadian tourists have indicated time and again that they were simply delighted with travelling on the autobahns, and even a bit envious. Might it be that Elleen Learoyd was still angry about that fine "for changing lanes" when she wrote that report?

Britain Tries Again

By ALAN HARVEY Canadian Press Staff Writer Can Prime Minister Mac

millan do it again? Seventeen months ago in Moscow the British leader figuratively stood toe to toe with Nikita Khrushchev and slugged out East-West differences.

Nobody had ever spoken to Khrushchev that way. It had an electric effect. Mr. K. sulked for a while - remember that us toothache?-but plain famous toothache?—but speaking made its mark. Kremlin began talking with a new reasonableness, and "dip-lomacy by dialogue" was born.

Macmillan is trying again. His personal letter to Khrushchev, unusual among diplomatic documents for its cool, let's - get - down - to-cases tone, represents another deter mined attempt to put East-West relations ahead of every-

The record indicates that the cold war is the prime minister's No. 1 concern. He is una week personally drafting the 1.200-word letter.

The portents for Macmillan's latest attempt at ice-breaking do not seem bright. SINCERITY

But the premier feels it is worth trying. His insistence is another proof of the sincerity of last year's "mission to Mos-cow," which some regarded more as a sign of consummate political artistry, aimed at British audiences, than as practical diplomacy.

It is an interesting sidelight that Macmillan's attitudes seem to have changed slightly since he became prime minis-ter in January, 1957. His emphasis then was more on firmness than on flexibility.

Our fishing is one of our very best tourist attractions, to be just that, but that is exactly the reason seriou that we should not literally give it away. People who believ we will lose a good part of our tourist business if we impos a more sensible charge for what we have to offer are a bit off base. Like every other product of attraction, fishing will bring what it is worth. And we need extra revenue to value and to hire enough enforcement of our regulations.

Bill was referring to fresh-water fishing when he made his recommendation but it is time we did something about imposing some sort of charge and of setting up some kind of limits for visiting anglers who fish our coastal waters. Our free fishing is abused.

I have written before about the American "tourists"

Licensing won't lose us many visiting fishermen but it is possible that the needed ban on the export of privately canned salmon might discourage some of those who now get a year's supply for themselves and their friends each summer. If it does, we'll gain in two ways.

Plants Under Foot

Backyard gardens these days are taking on more and more the role of outdoor living room, complete with barbecue, and to provide suitable sitting out and entertaining space, ex-tensive use is being made of crazy paving. This has a rather harsh appearance when the cracks between the slabs are cemented up and for my money it is a lot nicer to live with when the crevices are planted up with suitable carpeting plants.

The choice of these plants depends reconce of these plants depends very largely on the amount of foot traffic which is going to be passing over the crazy paving. The corner areas of a patio, for instance, get stepped on only occasionally while, for a much-used path or the bit in front of the bathers plants must be front of the barbecue, plants must be chosen which are very dwarf and which will thrive under considerable trampling.

Among the kinds which stand up under foot traffic, about the best are the Antennarias, ground hugging plants which lie perfectly flat except when in bloom and which seem to enjoy being stepped on. Antennaria Toes is a little honey, with woolly white leaves hardly half an inch long, although the flowers aren't much to

Dreams and Daydreams

Dr. Jung's Appraisal

Saucers 'Saviour Myth'

ZURICH (AP) — In Kuesnacht, Zurich's "intellectual suburb," stands a villa in a huge, untouched lakeside garden strewn with swans' nests and strange, totem-like stone figures. It is the home of Dr. Carl Gustav Jung, one of the founding fathers of modern psychiatry. Some of the stone images were hewn by Dr. Jung

Dr. Jung celebrates his 85th birth-day July 26. He is the last survivor of a famous group which, during the last 50 years, added new dimensions to man's view of himself and attacked his sunken world of irrational drives and impulses with weapons of analysis.

Dr. Jung was an early associate of Sigmund Freud. He found world recognition as a neurologist who defined and refined many basic concepts of psychiatry, but for many years he has been a dissenter from the Freud-ian school of psychoanalysis.

Now living in retirement at his Kuesnacht estate, Dr. Jung recently finished his memoirs.

His views concerning flying saucers some time ago caused a flurry of headlines — and some misunder standing.

Dr. Jung recognized the "unidentified flying objects" as "archtypes." These are irrational symbols of the human psyche which appear in dreams and may dominate daydreams as well. To the psychiatrist, they may become readily apparent in the behavior of neurotic or psychotic pa-tients. The archtypes signify con-cepts, urges and emotions, according to Dr. Jung, which reach far beyond the individual's life into the nebulous future and mystic past of the human

. . . archtypes

He is convinced that in a world dominated by fear and by doctrines which offer the individual no means of understanding it, a great change of the human psychological situation

Men, Dr. Jung holds, yearn for a redeemer. And the flying saucers represent modern man's saviour myth and are today's most striking arch-

Dr. Jung says that whether unidentified flying objects exist or not, the fact that so many people believe they saw them proves that man subsciously prays for a better, peace-

He points to a parallel from the 17th century. Then, during the great religious wars which divided the world as deeply as it is divided today, thousands of Europeans claimed they saw mysterious yellow discs revolving around the sun. They believed this to be a heavenly sign that the troubles were coming to an end. Symbols, like the circle, the disc, the cube, Jung explains, have always been considered symbols of whole-ness, perfection, divinity. And so the flying saucers signified the soul's longing for a remedy it believes can come only from a divine universe— "projected" into man's subconscious.

There's no use in efforts to reform the world, Dr. Jung thinks, if the re-former does not start out with himself. "The atom bombs are the symbol of man's omnipotence," he has said, "and nothing is more dangerous than man's thinking he is omnipotent. It jeopardizes his mental balance. His intellectual capacities are enormous, but his psychological development has not kept pace. That explains the cur-rent epidemic of neurosis."

Man must look into himself, Dr.

Jung teaches, for only the individual without illusions about human nature can defy collectivism. Each "true" in-dividual influences men around him and so causes a slow, silent evolution

The Farmers of British Columbia are independent business men striving to produce the finest food at the lowest possible prices. They contribute some $147,000,000 to the economy of our province but their importance cannot be measured in dollars alone. A prosperous agricultural industry is the basis for the overall

Plan your meals around B.C. foods in season. You'll feed your family better . . . and more economically. You help yourself and you help our province by keeping our money here where it will do the most good.

WONDERFUL B.C. FOODS

British Columbia foods are fast acquiring the fame they so richly deserve.

Our apples are so fragrant you know how good they'll taste while you're only smelling them. Peaches . . . plums . . . pears . . . sun-ripen to a flavour that's incomparable. From cherry-time through apricots to harvest time, every fruit that grows in our sunny B.C. valleys reaches a peak of excellence that is seldom matched elsewhere.

All Summer long we can eat B.C. new potatoes for their vitamin C content and it's worthwhile to tailor your menus to fit in plenty of new B.C. potatoes. Fat green peppers, plump red tomatoes, long cool cucumbers and onions are daily rushed to market during the season. The whole summer is a bouquet of good eating with B.C. fresh vegetables.

Beef from the Cariboo ranges, lamb from our Alpine meadows - are just two of the B.C. meats that for flavour and tenderness are second to none in the world. Get them when you can - they're worth the trouble of being a discriminating shopper.

One of the things you'll like about B.C. turkey is the variety of sizes from little five pounders to mammoth holiday birds of forty pounds. B.C. chicken — fryers, roasters, fowl — is now available all round the year. For succulent flavour, for tenderness, for ease of handling - you can't beat, and seldom equal, B.C. chicken and turkey.

We never outgrow our need for milk. And when we serve B.C. milk and B.C. fresh eggs, meal planning is easier. Ice-cream and other milk desserts, cottage cheese and cream sauces, omelets and souffles, egg-nogs and milk shakes . . . there are dozens of ways of including milk and eggs in the well-balanced diet.

Defence Minister George Pearkes will succeed present B.C. Lieutenant-Governor Frank M. Ross when the latter retires from the post this fall, according to high Ottawa sources.

It always seems to be som Week. Emphasis on salads is a relief for the kitchen staff in this glorious warm weather. Easy to pack for picnics and meals in the garden, crisp and cold lettuce and all the things that go with it is inviting for wilting eaters. Make sure it isn't the lettuce that is wilting, though.

Cold cuts or cottage cheese team well with salads, and both are on special in many stores this week

Jellied meats are a boon on a hot summer's day and especially nice to have on hand over the weekend when you wish Sunday more or less free.

How delicious is a jellied chicken or veal loaf with a langy potato salad, devilled eggs, raw relishes and a dessert of fresh fruit or berries.

Jellied meats make an economical main dish, too, for the cheaper cuts can go into it—

Solve the softened gelatine in the two cups hot broth and cool until thick as egg white. Add the cubed chicken, sait to taste, and ½ tsp. sage. In a loaf pan rinsed out in cold water arrange a row of sliced hard-cooked eggs down the length of the loaf pan. Carefully pour in the chicken mixture and refrigerate until supper time. Unmold on platter and garnish with radish roses and cress.

SELLIED CHICKEN LOAF
Choose a four to five-pound boiling fowl. Clean, wash thoroughly and put into large pot with two pork hocks or a pound of fresh pork using the cheaper cuts, but the hocks and the same ingredients as for the chicken loaf, cover it with water and simmer covered until meat is very tender—about 2½ to 3 hours depending on age and size of fowl.

Let cool in broth. Remove chicken. Skim off fat from broth and strain. Cook broth down to 2½ cupfuls. down to 2½ cupfuls.

Soften one envelope plain gelatine in the ½ cup of the cooled broth. While gelatine is softening cut up the chicken in neat cubes, removing all looking soft and wilted on

POTTED SHIN BEEF

Put into pot a three-pound shin bone of beef using the middle cut and one not too sparing of meat. Add a fresh pork hock, one good-sized onion sliced, a few sprigs parsley and celery leaves, a dozen whole black peppers slightly crushed and one clove—do not sait till cooked.

Cover with water and cook until meat falls from bones. Remove mea' and strain broth. Boil down to one cup. Dice the meats and add to broth—do not skim as the fat will rise to top when molded and make a perfect seal for the meat.

Farewell Attended By 3,000

The weather invariably co-operates for Victoria's major social event of the summer, the Government House garden party. Yesterday, it exceeded itself for the farewell party given by Lieutent - Governor Frank M. Ross, whose term of office is over in September, and Mrs. Ross.

It was a day of high fashion dresses and frothy hats were seen at their best.

Naden Band's Music Sets Gay Atmosphere

Music by the Royal Canadian Navy Band of HMCS Naden helped set the gay atmosphere prevailing at the Government House garden party yesterday.

Lilting Strauss waltzes, tunes from "My Fair Lady" and other shows, works of Robert Farnon and "pops" numbers kept the mood light and easy.

Lt.-Cmdr. S. Sutherland, officer in command of the RCN Band division was conducting the 44-man Naden band for the first time.

The band played from the slight slope leading to the lower lawn and tea marquees. Guests on the main and lower gardens could all hear the background music.

The gardens were ablaze with summer blooms, and as the warm afternoon drew to a close the scent of the flowers was wafted to all parts of the grounds. Large baskets filled with blooms were set out in front of the refresh-ment marquees and added to the colorful picture.

In the summer house a bowl of pale yellow carnations centred the tea tables, and baskets hanging along the walls were filled with large white daisies and pale yellow gladiolus.

Looking cool in a shady corner of the lower lawn at Government House yesterday, a group of friends, gathered glass in hand, were Mrs. W. Usborne, left; Mrs. R. J. Frost, Mrs. L. Lovitt and Mrs. G. Lovitt, all of Victoria.

Old Cannon to Roar Aboard the Victory

PORTSMOUTH, Eng. (AP) — Lord Nelson's ghost must be pleased by the Royal Navy's decision Tuesday to fire one of the cannon aboard his old flagship, HMS Victory.

This old muzzle-loader last spoke in anger when Nelson defeated the combined French and Spanish fleets at Trafalgar in 1805. The demonstration will take place during the Navy Days being celebrated in Portsmouth July 30 and 31 and Aug. 1. Victory remains just as she was when Nelson met his death aboard her at Trafalgar. She rests in a permanent drydock.

"The larger pieces dived down to earth and this saved the equipment from smash-

It was the first time the Russians had described the downing of the aircraft in any detail. There has been considerable doubt in the West of the Russian claim that a rocket brought the U-2 down because, 1. the Russians re-covered so much equipment from the plane; 2, the pilot was not killed, and 3, the plane did not catch fire or disintegrate on crashing. The Izvestia report seemed an attempt to counter these doubts.

No Voice, Says Argue

Prairie Tories 'Silent Force'

SASKATOON (CP)—The 47
Progressive Conservative members of Parliament from the Prairie provinces were described Wednesday by CCF house leader Hazen Argue as "the silent force in the House of Commons."

Mr. Argue told 500 delegates attending the CCF provincial convention the Conservative members give Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba no representation in the federal government. Mr. Argue is to make up his mind, Mr. Argue said, at a time when "we need leadership to put the people to work, to give security to the old-age citizens and solve the problems facing agriculture."

He said Prime Minister Dieferbaker led the Progressive Conservative party to victory by promising many of the planks in the CCF platform. He accused Mr. Diefenbaker of failing to carry out any of the promises.

The Argue told 500 delegates attending the CCF platform. Argue is the work, to give security to the old-age citizens and solve the problems facing agriculture."

He said there now are 400,000 unemployed in Canada, adding that where the government was talking of winter work programs a couple of years ago, there now is talk of summer work programs.

The refusal of the prime minister to grant five farm representatives an interview regarding acreage payments is a 'blotch on democracy.'

Mr. Argue said.

"If Mr. Diefenbaker does not start seeing the farm representatives soon," he said, tained by phoning GR 8-3844.

On the July 1 to 3 weekend more than 150 American yachts and trailer boats were checked at Bedwell Harbor and Sidney. Last year customs officials checked more than 5,000 vessels in and out of those ports, which gives some idea of the use Americans make of Gulf Islands waters.

At present the survey information is being taken by fisheries officials on a voluntary basis. Checks are made on alternate weekends at Sidney and Bedwell Harbor and daily alternate weekends at Sidney and Bedwell Harbor and daily at Nanaimo. It could become compulsory.

Information is compiled in two sections—one as a boat enters B.C. waters and the other as it leaves—and pertains entirely to sport fishing intent of the yachting parties.

Questions are asked about the number of fishing rods carried; the areas where the main fishing is to be carried on: if any other persons will join the party later; how long the party expects to be in Canada; facilities carried for canning and preserving fish.

Upon leaving B.C. waters yachtsmen are asked how many days they spent in Canada; how many days they spent in Canada; how many days they spent gord faint of canned, frozen or smoked fish on hand at departure.
